Foreign Outlook Improved By the Action of Germany

New York, May 18.—A change seems to be in the atmosphere of current events. We have long been agitated by a sense of keen apprehension that the great crisis through which we are now passing would not end without some disturbance at home. These fears had their inception in the war and our relations with Germany and Mexico and certainly had good foundation. As regards Germany, the outlook has been much improved by the frank admission of responsibility for sinking the Sussex and the promise of reparations. The promises of Germany to also modify her submarine policy in accordance with the wishes of the American government are also encouraging, and if fulfilled should insure friendly relations between the two countries. The situation was immensely clarified by President Wilson's decisive note last week which was practically an ultimatum. There is every reason to hope that Germany will avoid a rupture with the United States since we are really her best remaining friend among the neutral powers and can be of valuable service when peace negotiations actually begin. The desire of Germany to end the war is unquestionable. Peace feelers have been repeatedly put forward, and the belief in its early coming strengthens daily.

The greatest hindrance to peace now is the strong inclination of the allies to push the war to a final conclusion. The final struggle between the armies of the central powers and the entente is probably yet to come; as yet neither side has conquered, and no satisfactory or lasting peace can be established until one side or the other has been forced into submission. Thus while peace is in the air, and while the mad thirst for war has been superceded by a sane longing for peace, there is no immediate prospect as yet for any such conclusion. The war promises to continue for some time yet, unless something happens which will compel concessions on both sides. Meanwhile, peace talk will grow, and all rational efforts to that end should be encouraged for the good of the belligerents in particular and the benefit of mankind in general. The Mexican outlook is far from satisfactory, and the danger of our becoming more deeply involved in that quarter is constantly increasing. We are certainly threatened with a long and costly difficulty, the outcome of which cannot at this time be foreseen.

How long is the feverish business activity of the last few months to continue? During the first four months of the current year, bank clearings by the treasury total of $78,000,000, or nearly 45 per cent more than the same time last year. Making allowance for the rise in values—and an increase of nearly 60 per cent in New York's clearings which were more than half the above total and swollen by unusual financial operations—it is evident there has been a very considerable increase in the volume of American business. Perhaps railroad earnings are a better indication in this respect than bank clearings. The railroads have earned about 20 per cent more so far this year than a year ago, and the gain is only partly due to better rates, traffic having made most encouraging gains. Exports for the last nine months were about 50 per cent ahead in value of last year and similar showed an increase of about 25 per cent over a year ago. Over $1,000,000,000 of new capital has been raised in the last year, and the total of new issues for the last year is about $1,000,000,000, or five times what they were a year ago. Such evidence of extraordinary activity could be multiplied indefinitely, and encouraging as they may be they unavoidably raise the question, when will a halt be due. Optimism continues on the flood tide, and there are no signs of weakness in the industrial fabric; albeit there are certain changes in tendencies and conditions which should not escape notice. First, commodity prices have risen to a point that not infrequently arrests new business. The index number of the London Economist stood at 4,190 on April 3rd, compared with 3,337 a year ago; a rise of about 25 per cent in value, chiefly in minerals, timber and beef. The rise in American markets was probably not quite so extreme as this, but it has been very considerable and is now exerting its effect upon credit. The great expansion in loaning capacity of the banks brought about by large gold imports, the new banking law and other circumstances, especially the war, produced the much expected inflation. Bankers are now scrutinizing loans more carefully, since credits have been greatly extended and much larger sums are required to finance a given amount of merchandise than formerly, at least on commodities at such dizzy heights and exposed to a reaction, bankers are justified in exercising greater discrimination. Further, the cost of doing business has been tremendously enhanced by the rise in raw materials and the elevation of wages. Such developments mean that the next twelve months will not see a repetition of the bulge in profits of the last twelve months. Again, foreign munition orders, which did much to swell both profits and exports, may be repeated, but on a decidedly smaller scale with the prospect of almost vanishing when peace comes. In many cases new enterprises have been deferred until costs of building declines. Not a few concerns, notably in the steel industry, are sold ready so completely as to be unable to take further orders, or at least until the outlook for raw materials is more satisfactory. While the prospect for peace, as said above, is not yet in sight, it is practically certain that a cessation of hostilities is not very far distant, when both domestic and foreign trade will be demobilized or readjusted upon a peace basis. It would be decidedly erroneous to expect to return to the war and conditions existing before the war. On the contrary, many problems will be wholly new and quite perplexing, if not more so, as those now in the melting pot. New forces, new conditions, new ambitions, new policies, new methods, new markets and new opportunities in endless procession will bring in a flood of fresh problems, the solution of which will require much prudence and time for adjustment.

In spite of such perplexities, the business outlook for the country as a whole is decidedly promising. The West is practically assured of another year of prosperity because of the high price for all food and agricultural products. Labor in other parts of the world has been so diverted from production to destruction that this country is practically sure of another good export season for raw materials, particularly grain and cotton. For our mineral products there is also an unprecedented demand; notably copper, petroleum, iron and coal, all of which are bringing, accordingly high and profitable prices. There is no cessation of the boom in the iron trade, except for the indisposition of the steel companies to accept further orders for 1917 owing to the uncertainty of securing raw materials. The railroads have been liberal buyers of steel products and in some portions of the country the building trades, though spotty, show much activity. The textile industries are in a satisfactory condition, although manufacturers have been somewhat embarrassed by adjusting themselves to higher wages and the loss of considerable of their export trade. The outlook generally, however, for textiles, clothing and food products is encouraging for the reason that wage advances have materially augmented the buying power of a considerable proportion of our population.

If we except the munition stocks, there has been no such inflation in the security markets as exist in commodities. The war group has lately been adversely affected by peace rumors. Other classes of industrials have, however, been well sustained and the better class of railroad shares have received much more attention from buyers after a long period of comparative neglect. Some issues scored sharp advances. The former tendency of the money market and the liberal return of securities from abroad as a result of "mobilizing" operations have tended to restrain any active advance in the stock market. Intrinsic conditions, however, are sound and the outlook continues favorable, the only obstacles to a further rise at this time being foreign selling of Americans, the risk of trouble with Germany, and the unsettled state of affairs with Mexico.
